"We take pride in engcon's position as the world's leading manufacturer of tiltrotators. Our innovative products enable more effective and sustainable use of resources by transforming excavators into multi-purpose tool carriers that replace other machines, and our market is expected to show strong growth for many years to come. Today's listing on Nasdaq Stockholm will support our journey to change the world of digging and we will work hard to deliver on the trust placed in us by our customers and shareholders."

Stig Engström, founder and principal owner of engcon, comments:

"This is an exciting day for engcon and marks a major milestone for me personally. We have come a long way since I founded the company over 30 years ago. engcon's ambition is to continue to develop future solutions for a smarter, safer and more efficient way of digging. It is gratifying that such a strong investor base will be by our side and support us in the future, and that so many from the general public have shown interest in investing in engcon. I look forward to continuing to be an active owner and would like to extend a warm welcome to all our new shareholders."

engcon is the world's leading manufacturer of tiltrotators with a global market share of approximately 45 per cent, based on the number of tiltrotators sold in 2021.[4] The Company was founded in 1990 with the ambition to change the world of digging through product innovation and focus on end-users. The product offering includes tiltrotators, quick couplers, hydraulic and mechanical tools as well as control and safety systems that contribute to increased profitability, efficiency, flexibility, safety and sustainability for example when working with pipelines, road construction, water and sewerage works, railway constructions, electrical works, telecom and broadband works, construction sites and landscaping.

engcon develops innovative value-creating and sustainable solutions that are based on the needs of the end-user and contribute to increased resource efficiency, safety and profitability. A tiltrotator can increase the productivity of an excavator by approximately 25 per cent compared to excavation without a tiltrotator and can replace an average of 2.2 other construction machines.[5] Furthermore, the use of a tiltrotator can save approximately 6,000 litres of diesel per year, which corresponds to approximately 16,200 kilograms of annual carbon dioxide emissions and approximately 113,000 kilograms of carbon dioxide emissions during the excavator's lifetime.[6] The tiltrotator with its advanced tools can help prevent work-related accidents as it allows excavator users to change tools from the excavator cabin and reduces the need for manual groundwork near the excavator. Since the inception of the Company, R&D has been a key element of the business and a prerequisite for the Company to achieve its product strategy over business cycles. Through a combination of good underlying profitability, strategic savings and investments, such as product development as well as streamlined production and procurement processes, engcon considers itself to have demonstrated a competitive strategy that has made the Company to come out stronger from both economic upturns and downturns.

engcon's head office is located in Strömsund, Sweden, and the Company had an average of 327 full-time employees globally during the financial year ended 31 December 2021. The Company has two production facilities, one in Strömsund and one in Nieprusze, Poland. engcon's production mainly consists of assembly of purchased components, which allows for a low level of tied up capital and makes the production adaptable for new product innovations and improvements without larger costs.
